Luke Shepherd

Biography

Birth date 1961

Introduction Too traditional to be taken seriously at Art College, yet too gifted to be ignored, Luke Shepherd has always made portrait busts, working directly in the clay without the need for preliminary drawing. He became recognised early in his career as a portrait sculptor with his distinguished and enduring bust of the late George Thomas - the Rt. Hon. The Viscount Tonypany, speaker of the House of Commons 1976-84. The bronze was selected from over 14,000 entrants for the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition and also for the Academie des Beaux Arts, Paris and subsequently purchased for the public collection of the National Library of Wales.

With a long string of successful public and private commission, Luke has re-introduced a renaissance style approach based on time-honoured skills combined with minute observational detail. He is one of the few sculptors' fully versed in bronze casting having received a diploma from the Royal College of Art Foundry Course. This enables him to maintain the finest quality and subtle detail in his portrait work.

Luke is much in demand as both an artist and educator for the Royal College of Surgeons of England where he teaches portrait modelling to plastic and maxillofacial surgeons. Luke's flare and ability is above all for portrait sculpture, admiring great artists such as Rembrandt, Michelangelo and the Impressionists. He is a member of the South West Sculptors Association and lives in rural Devon with his wife, Aga and studio.

- Artist Statement I have always made portrait busts and I see myself upholding traditional values of art. I work with minute modifications until both client and myself are fully satisfied with the finished clay, before proceeding with the casting. I employ a fine balance of strong draughtsmanship, sensitive observation and overall an immense enjoyment of being with people. I set my goals high and strive for perfection.
