Jonathan Tetley

Biography

Birth date 1952

Introduction Brought up in Wiltshire, Jonathan Tetley went on to attend Bryanston School before starting a foundation course at Winchester School of Art in 1969. After going on to study illustration and graphic design at Bristol Polytechnic, including printmaking under David Inshaw, Jonathan left art school in 1973 and worked as an illustrator and graphic designer for MediCine Ltd. in London until 1975. After a year of printmaking at The Banana Warehouse, Wapping, he worked as a typographer and illustrator for The Compton Press. After a period working freelance and making a start with portraiture, he started painting in watercolour and studied life drawing with Michael Charlton at St. Edmund's Arts Centre in Salisbury, and at Bath University with students of Cecil Collins. Between 1994 and 1997, he studied portrait drawing and painting at Charles H. Cecil Studios in Florence and since then has been accepting commissions, exhibiting and also going back to teach at Charles H. Cecil Studios.

Artist Statement

In portrait painting, I favour a naturalistic approach to the figurative as much as possible. Apart from achieving the sitter's overall and obvious appearance I endeavour to incorporate as much of the sitter's personality, character and temperament as possible; my objective being that the beholder viewing the final work not only sees a good likeness but has a real feeling for the person portrayed.
